THE STORY SO FAR

The FIA Formula 3 Championship officially gets underway at the Bahrain International Circuit in Sakhir this weekend, one of two new venues featured on the Championship's 18-race, 9-round calendar in 2022. The 30-strong field returns to Sakhir this weekend just a fortnight after pre-season testing at the circuit, which saw Hitech Grand Prix rookie Isack Hadjar top the timesheets with the quickest time across all three days of running.

It was Trident newcomer Zane Maloney who finished at the top on the opening day of pre-season testing earlier this month, with the Barbadian driver setting the quickest time of the day during the cooler afternoon stint. Maloney had also finished in the top two in the morning of Day 1, just 0.013s off PREMA Racing's Arthur Leclerc.

Day 2 saw another rookie shine in the cockpit, with Hadjar setting the quickest time of the day in the morning session to beat out two returnees, ART Grand Prix's Victor Martins and Trident's Jonny Edgar. Despite missing out in the morning session Martins, the highest-placed returning driver from 2021 finished the afternoon session in the lead with Hadjar two places further back in P3.

Red Bull junior Hadjar topped the timesheets for a second successive time on the third day of running, going quickest in the morning session before a sandstorm ultimately hampered the afternoon stint. PREMA's Jak Crawford and ART's Grégoire Saucy finished in second and third, as Hadjar ended the final day with a comfortable 0.381s margin over the pair. Not only was Hadjar's time of 1:47.247 good enough for the best time of the day, but it also saw him go quickest across the entire test.

THE CHALLENGERS

Roman Staněk was one of several returning drivers to impress in pre-season testing, finishing in the top ten in all but one session across the three days of running. The Trident driver finished P2 on the afternoon of Day 2 and then went on to top the timesheets in the afternoon on the final day.

Alpine Academy's Victor Martins was another returning driver to regularly appear in the top half of the leaderboard, finishing in the top ten in four of six sessions and topping the afternoon of the second day. The ART driver's teammate, Grégoire Saucy, also managed to match Martins' successful run of finishes, posting four top ten times of his own.

Not only did Hitech Grand Prix rookie Hadjar manage to top two successive days, and finish testing with a time more than three tenths quicker than his nearest rival, but similarly to Martins and Saucy, he also finished in the top ten in all but two sessions.

FROM THE GRID

Victor MARTINS
ART Grand Prix

"I am extremely excited to be racing here. It's the first time for me in Bahrain so I don't know the track. It's the first race, it's where you see where you are in the field for the first time. You see what the pace is, so it's exciting. It's also a good place for me because I won the Karting World Championship here in Bahrain six years ago, so it has a lot of good memories for me. I want to do well here again.

There's a lot of hard braking zones here, and that's what I like, when you smash the brakes as late as possible, and you bring the maximum speed into the corner. Then, there are some good sections, like Turn 6 and Turn 7, which are fast corners. What I think is important and quite fun here is the tyre degradation in Sector 3 on a push lap. I really like the whole track to be honest.

For overtaking opportunities, you've got Turn 1 obviously. Also, on the braking zones maybe you can dive from quite far back, but we will have to see. There are also three DRS zones, so you can be quite close to the driver in front, after Turn 3 there is a DRS zone so maybe you can overtake at Turn 4, maybe on the outside, maybe on the inside. I will be watching a few Formula 2 races from the past and learn from them."

TYRE TALK

Mario ISOLA
Pirelli Motorsport Director

"It will be exciting to see a new Formula 3 season starting alongside those of Formula 1 and Formula 2 in Bahrain. This is the first time that the championship will race there, but the data gathered in pre-season testing two weeks ago means that it won't be a complete step into the unknown for the teams or drivers. With all of the F3 sessions taking place during the day, the high temperatures will place considerable demands on the tyres together with the particularly abrasive track surface. This year we are introducing a new rear tyre construction in F3 with the aim of increasing the involvement of the driver and allowing them to demonstrate their talent. In particular, the rear tyres have been designed to degrade faster, which should shift the balance towards oversteer and make the car more challenging to drive."
